

ISO 22301 Internal Auditor

Learn why and how to audit your organisation's business continuity management systems against ISO 22301, to lower the risk of and be prepared for unexpected business interruption.

A business continuity management system (BCMS) can help your organisation prepare for, minimise the risk of, and respond to unexpected operational disruption.

By carrying out internal audits of your BCMS you can identify how well that system is performing against your own organisational requirements and those of the ISO 22301 standard for business continuity management systems. Auditing helps you to determine where improvements can be made, not just once but on a continual basis.

This 2-day ISO 22301 Internal Auditor training course explains the standard and describes the role of the internal auditor in maintaining as effective BCMS. Led by an expert tutor, the course incorporates engaging teaching modules, supported by interactive workshops to practise skills as they are learned.

Very knowledgeable tutor, explained things very well, quite often giving relatable scenarios making things easy to understand. Created a relaxed atmosphere making it fell very easy to contribute.

Polyco Healthline

The reflections I gathered on best practice exceeded my expectations. The tutor was able to clearly outline best practice and I could see easily areas of improvement within my organisation.

UK Hydrographic Office

There were useful exercises, especially on the afternoon of the second day, that could help in terms of auditing. The time spent looking at the BC standard was useful to become more familiar.
